Testimonies in favour of the First Edition of the above Work.

This Dictionary brings within a moderate compass many useful particulars, among which the summary accounts of the persons mentioned in Scripture may deserve distinct notice. We are acquainted with no publication in which sketches of Scriptural Biography are so neatly given; and it is no small recommendation of the work, that it is drawn up with an uniform attention to grammatical accuracy. ON THE WHOLE, WE CONSIDER IT AS A RESPECTABLE AND USEFUL PERFORMANCE. MONTHLY REVIEW.

This solid, instructive, and beneficial Compendium of the Scriptures, is entitled to more than a common attention. Like a cabinet of medals, it may be considered as a body of history. Though it is not altogether an original undertaking, nevertheless a considerable tribute of praise is due to those concerned in the performance. There are few modern publications, which have so many urgent claims on the Public, as that which is now before us, whether we consider its design or execution. We should be happy, by any thing we could say, to wreath an honorary chaplet to adorn the brows of this judicious compiler; and we can venture to affirm, that none can peruse it without deriving from it very considerable pleasure and advantage.

GOSPEL MAGAZINE.

Testimonies in favour of the Second Edition.

The public have done just honour to this compendious and useful Work, and rendered it less necessary for Reviewers to enlarge in its commendation. A second edition being called for, the Compiler has made some valuable additions to it. Besides corrections and enlargements in the body of the Work, he has decorated it with two neat coloured maps, one of the Travels of the Apostles, and the other of the Land of Canaan, as divided among the Twelve Tribes, and five other descriptive plates; and has added, by way of Appendix, several Essays on particular biblical subjects, both entertaining and instructive to the attentive reader. We wish it may have a place at least in the library of every minister. The subjects, on which it gives information in a few words, are very numerous and important. They ought to be well understood by those whose professed business it is to "labour in the word and doctrine." This compilation may be consulted to considerable advantage without much expence of money or of time, and without much labour of thought. We think we may safely conclude with saying, that few publications deserve to be more ardently recommended to every theological student.

GENERAL BAPTIST MAGAZINE.

The plates added to this edition are seven, and several of them ~~executed with taste~~. The first, fronting the title page, copied, we ~~suppose, with some improvements~~, from Maurice's Indian History, represents the seed of the woman bruising the serpent's head. The fifth is a map of the Holy Land, p. 69, after its division ~~among the~~ Twelve Tribes, and the limits elegantly coloured. A map of the Apostolical Circuit, page 33, ~~completes the number~~. We recommend the two last-mentioned as the most useful.

The Appendix, consisting of eight essays and sixty-two pages, comprises much matter in the miniature form; and the Chronological Table is, in like manner, a microscopical ~~view of an immense object~~.

In this elaborate, though small volume, rare, we believe, are the instances of material omission. With a few emendations and ~~improvements, we venture to presage it would be acceptable~~ in the form of a sizeable octavo. In its present plain, but not inelegant habit, the admirers of exquisite mechanism may peruse its contents without disgust, even the learned with improvement, and the well-disposed, serious reader, with a growing progress in KNOWLEDGE, FAITH, HOPE, and GODLINESS.

LONDON REVIEW, February, 1800.

We cannot help being greatly prejudiced in favour of this work, on account of its intrinsic value and usefulness, and the marks of real ingenuity exhibited in this Dictionary. In a former number, we gave our decided approbation in favour of this publication, which we acknowledged had a very considerable degree of merit, a great fund of entertainment, as well as of knowledge and information. If we may be permitted to add to our former commendation, we must say that the compilers are entitled to still greater praise for the attention, emendations, and additions added to this second impression, adorned with several elegant engravings, which will no doubt be deemed a very agreeable addition to the work.

GOSPEL MAGAZINE, Feb. 1800.

The former edition of this work was reviewed in our Magazine for 1797. In the present edition, several mistakes are corrected, and the new matter in the Appendix is valuable and judicious. Upon the whole, we know of no work of the same kind in which so much scriptural information is comprised in so small a compass.

- 50 THE AGE OF INFIDELITY, in Answer to PAINE'S AGE OF REASON. Two Parts. 4s.
- N.B.—This is generally acknowledged to be the best answer to the Age of Reason ever published. The British Critic spoke of it in the following very high terms.

When we gave our account of Tom Paine's pamphlet, we lamented that any men of education should have given it consequence by answering it. On perusing the tract before us, we were almost tempted to retract our words. So CLEAR, SO MANLY, SO DISPASSIONATE A PRODUCTION WE HAVE SELDOM SEEN. It consists of two parts, the former contains a concise, but very distinct and masterly view of the evidences of christianity; the latter, a complete and strong answer to all the cavils of Paine, detecting his fallacies, and exposing his ignorance. If an answer was to be written for the higher classes of society, this is such a one as we could have wished to see. It is a tract of value to those who have not seen Paine's as well as to others.
